

JOHN W. MILLER III
Deputy Director
Maneuver Capability Development
and Integration Directorate
Army Futures Command

John W. Miller III currently serves as the Deputy Director, Maneuver Capabilities and Development Integration Directorate (MCDID) at Fort Benning, Georgia.

Prior to this assignment, Mr. Miller served in a variety of positions in MCDID to include duties as the Director, Maneuver Requirements Division and leadership positions in the Next Generation Combat Vehicle Cross Functional Team and with the Army's Capability Manager for Armored Brigade Combat Teams. Mr. Miller's service as a Department of the Army Civilian follows his retirement from active duty with more than 28 years of service in the United States Army as an Infantryman.

Mr. Miller holds a Bachelor of Arts in Criminal Justice from Old Dominion University, a Master of Strategic Studies from the United States Army War College, a Master of Education (Training and Development) from the University of Louisville, and a Master of Military History from the University of Alabama. He has completed Harvard University's John F. Kennedy School of Government Senior Executive Fellows Program.